COURT OF APPEAL, PUTRAJAYA

[CIVIL APPEAL NO: W-02-939-2002]
1 NOVEMBER 2007

LAND LAW: Charge - Order for sale - Cause to the contrary - Whether established - National Land Code, s. 256(3)

MONEYLENDERS: Charge - Security for loan - Order for sale - Non-compliance with provisions of Moneylenders Act 1951 - Whether chargee exempted from compliance thereof

The appellant was a financial institution governed by the Moneylenders Act 1951 ('the Act'). The respondent created a third party charge in favour of the appellant to secure a loan of RM7.5 million from the appellant to one Tow Kong Liang ('the borrower') vide a loan agreement. The parties admitted and agreed that the purpose of the loan granted to the borrower was for share financing. During the tenure of the loan period, the appellant alleged that the Ministry of Housing and Local Government exempted it from complying with the Act pursuant to s. 2A(2) of the same in relation to credit leasing and share financing activities. The borrower defaulted in the repayment of the loan and was sent letters of demand by the appellant which the borrower failed to meet. Subsequently the appellant filed an application for an order for sale. However, that was dismissed by the High Court. Hence, the appeal.

Held (dismissing the appeal)
Per Suriyadi Halim Omar JCA delivering the judgment of the court:

(1) The present case was a case of a guarantor who had charged his property on behalf of a borrower with the charge being a form of security for the balance of the loan granted in 1995. The charge document showed that the charge was merely for additional security for the balance of the original loan. There was no indication that the charge was in respect of any credit leasing or share financing transaction. The facts showed that it was not just a case of a person or entity lending money in a 'friendly' manner but a contract subjected to the demanding provisions of the Moneylenders Act 1951. If the appellant were not to comply with any of the provisions strictly, it would have acted in a manner contrary to a written law and would tantamount to a cause to the contrary under s. 256(3) of the National Land Code ('NLC'). Such non-compliance would be ample reason to dismiss the foreclosure proceedings. (paras 6, 8 & 9)

(2) There was no mistaking that the appellant had not complied strictly with the Act. However, the appellant justified that non-compliance on the premise of an alleged exemption given by the government earlier. If the evidence was to show that the appellant was a recognised moneylender that was lawfully exempted by the Ministry for that relevant period, then its shortcomings could be salvaged but only for that particular period. (para 12)

(3) The facts showed that the charge and the default payment committed by the borrower occurred in the middle of the alleged exemption period. However, the letter from the Ministry of Housing and Local Government informing the appellant of the exemption was insufficient to show proof of exemption. The relevant gazette was not made available to the court. It must be understood that the exemption was founded on a statute and no other evidence could speak out louder than the relevant gazette. Its non-production was not a mere irregularity that could be overlooked and waived especially since the respondent challenged it. Without such proof the court was not willing to accept the submission that an exemption had been granted by the Ministry. Further, the letter was subject to certain conditions. The exemption could be withdrawn if the appellant did not comply with the conditions. There was no evidence to establish compliance of all the conditions. Even if the exemption had been granted, the court was not satisfied that the exemption covered the purpose of the charge. Evidentially, it was obvious that the charge was not connected to any credit leasing and share financing activities but as an additional security for a previous loan. Most adverse to the appellant was the fact that the exemption was not retrospective but current and prospective. (paras 14, 15, 16 & 18)

(4) The appellant was a mere moneylender subject to the full force of the provisions of the Moneylenders Act 1951. The court was in total agreement with the following findings of fact by the learned judge: (1) the appellant had not given a copy of the note or memorandum of the moneylender's contract to the borrower in contravention of s. 16 of the Act; (2) the appellant had imposed compound interest in the agreement contrary to s. 17 of the Act; (3) no accounts were tendered in court by the appellant thereby contravening s. 21 of the Act; (4) the appellant had imposed an interest at the rate of 16% contrary to s. 22 of the Act and (5) by imposing costs, charges and other expenses the appellant had contravened s. 23 of the Act. (para 20)

(5) Since the appellant had not sufficiently established that it was an exempted entity at the relevant time coupled with the obvious evidence that it had breached a large number of provisions in the Act, the court was satisfied that "cause to the contrary" was established within s. 256(3) of the NLC. (para 21)

Bahasa Malaysia Translation Of Headnotes

Perayu adalah sebuah institusi kewangan yang dikawalselia oleh Akta Pemberipinjam Wang 1951 ('Akta'). Melalui satu perjanjian pinjaman, responden memeterai gadaian pihak ketiga bagi manfaat perayu untuk mendapatkan pinjaman sebanyak RM7.5 juta dari perayu untuk seorang Tow Kong Liang ('peminjam'). Pihak-pihak mengakui dan bersetuju bahawa tujuan pinjaman yang diberikan kepada peminjam adalah untuk pembiayaan saham. Perayu mendakwa bahawa di sepanjang tempoh pinjaman, Kementerian Perumahan dan Kerajaan Tempatan telah mengecualikannya dari mematuhi Akta berdasarkan s. 2A(2)nya berkaitan dengan aktiviti-aktiviti pinjaman pajakan dan pinjaman pembiayaan saham. Peminjam memungkiri pembayaran balik pinjaman dan telah diserahkan dengan surat-surat tuntutan oleh perayu yang gagal dipatuhi oleh peminjam. Berikutnya, perayu memfail permohonan untuk perintah jualan. Permohonan bagaimanapun ditolak oleh Mahkamah Tinggi dan perayu merayu.

Diputuskan (menolak rayuan)
Oleh Suriyadi Halim Omar HMR menyampaikan penghakiman mahkamah:

(1) Kes semasa adalah kes seorang penjamin yang menggadaikan hartanahnya bagi pihak peminjam di mana gadaian menjadi sekuriti terhadap baki pinjaman yang diberikan pada tahun 1995. Dokumen gadaian menunjukkan bahawa gadaian hanyalah sebagai sekuriti tambahan untuk baki pinjaman asal. Tiada tanda bahawa gadaian adalah berkaitan mana-mana transaksi pinjaman pajakan atau pinjaman pembiayaan saham. Fakta-fakta menunjukkan bahawa ini bukan semata-mata kes seorang atau satu entiti meminjamkan wang secara 'bersahaja' tetapi adalah satu kontrak yang tertakluk kepada peruntukan-peruntukan ketat Akta Pemberipinjam Wang 1951. Jika perayu tidak mematuhi dengan ketatnya mana-mana peruntukan Akta, itu bererti bahawa perayu telah bertindak dengan cara yang melanggar undang-undang bertulis sekaligus menjadikannya satu 'cause to the contrary' di bawah s. 256(3) Kanun Tanah Negara ('KTN'). Ketidakpatuhan sedemikian menjadi alasan kukuh untuk menolak prosiding halang tebus.

(2) Tidak syak lagi bahawa perayu telah tidak mematuhi Akta dengan ketatnya. Bagaimanapun, perayu telah menjustifikasikan ketidak-patuhannya atas dasar pengecualian yang diberikan oleh kerajaan sebelum itu. Jika keterangan menunjukkan bahawa perayu adalah seorang pemberipinjam wang yang diiktiraf dan telah dikecualikan oleh Kementerian untuk tempoh yang relevan, maka kegagalannya boleh dimaafkan tetapi cuma untuk tempoh tersebut sahaja.

(3) Fakta menunjukkan bahawa gadaian dan kemungkiran pembayaran yang dilakukan peminjam berlaku di pertengahan tempoh pengecualian yang dikatakan. Bagaimanapun, surat dari Kementerian Perumahan dan Kerajaan Tempatan yang memberitahu perayu mengenai pengecualian adalah tidak mencukupi untuk membuktikan pengecualian. Gazet yang relevan tidak dikemukakan kepada mahkamah. Harus difahami bahawa pengecualian adalah berasas kepada statut dan tiada keterangan selainnya boleh membuktikan pengecualian selain dari gazet yang relevan. Kegagalan mengemukakan gazet bukan semata-mata suatu ketidak-teraturan yang boleh dimaaf dan dipandang begitu sahaja, terutama apabila ianya dicabar oleh responden. Tanpa bukti tersebut, mahkamah tidak boleh menerima hujah bahawa suatu pengecualian telah diberikan oleh Kementerian. Selain itu, surat juga adalah tertakluk kepada syarat-syarat. Pengecualian boleh ditarik balik jika perayu tidak mematuhi syarat-syarat. Tiada keterangan yang menunjukkan bahawa semua syarat-syarat telah dipatuhi. Namun begitu, jikapun pengecualian memang telah diberi, mahkamah tidak berpuas hati bahawa pengecualian itu merangkumi tujuan gadaian. Berdasarkan keterangan, jelas bahawa gadaian tidak berkaitan dengan mana-mana aktiviti pinjaman pajakan dan pinjaman pembelian saham, tetapi adalah sebagai sekuriti tambahan kepada pinjaman terdahulu. Paling menjejaskan perayu adalah fakta bahawa pengecualian tidak retrospektif tetapi adalah bersifat semasa dan prospektif.

(4) Perayu hanyalah seorang pemberipinjam wang yang tertakluk kepada pengawasan penuh peruntukan-peruntukan Akta Pemberipinjam Wang 1951. Mahkamah bersetuju sepenuhnya dengan dapatan fakta yang arif hakim bahawa: (1) perayu gagal memberi salinan nota atau memorandum kontrak pemberipinjam wang kepada peminjam sekaligus melanggari s. 16 Akta; (2) perayu telah mengenakan faedah berganda di dalam perjanjian yang bertentangan dengan s. 17 Akta; (3) tiada akaun dikemukakan di mahkamah oleh perayu yang mana melanggari s. 21 Akta; (4) perayu mengenakan faedah pada kadar 16% sekaligus bertentangan dengan s. 22 Akta; dan (5) dengan mengenakan kos, caj dan belanja-belanja lain perayu telah juga melanggar s. 23 Akta.

(5) Oleh kerana perayu gagal membuktikan secukupnya bahawa ia adalah entiti yang dikecualikan pada waktu yang relevan dan ditambah dengan keterangan jelas bahawa ia telah melanggar berbagai-bagai peruntukan Akta, mahkamah berpuas hati bahawa "cause to the contrary" telah dibuktikan di bawah s. 256(3) KTN.

JUDGMENT

Suriyadi Halim Omar JCA:

F [1] This appeal arose from the dismissal with costs on 5 November 2002 by the learned High Court Judge of the appellant's application, for an order for sale in respect of land held under H.S. (D) 83488, number P.T 43, Mukim Kuala Lumpur, Wilayah Persekutuan which the respondent had charged to the G appellant. The appellant is a financial institution governed by the Moneylenders Act l951 and the respondent a third party chargor. The respondent had created a third party first legal charge dated 20 April 1998 registered in favour of the appellant vide charge presentation No. 4823/98 to secure a loan of RM7.5 million from H the appellant to one, Tow Kong Liang ("the borrower") and granted vide Memorandum of Loan Agreement dated 27 February 1995. It was admitted and agreed upon by all the parties that the purpose of the loan of RM7.5 million, granted to the borrower, was for share financing.

I

[2] In the midst of the loan agreement period, the appellant alleged that an exemption was granted by the Housing & Local Government Ministry under s. 2A(2) of the Act, for the period from 29 August 1997 until 28 August 2001 ("the exemption period) of all the provisions of the Moneylenders Act 1951. As it were, the borrower defaulted in the repayment of his loan and the appellant's solicitors sent letters of demand to the borrower dated 18 June 1998 and 1 July 1998. As the borrower failed to remedy the breach, the appellant through its solicitors sent a letter of demand dated 4 February 1999 to the respondent and subsequently issued a notice under Form 16D of the National Land Code 1965 dated 12 June 2000, seeking repayment of the sum secured under the charge. With the respondent's failure to remedy the breach, the appellant filed an application for an order for sale on 4 October 2000. That application was supported by an affidavit affirmed by one Lim Cheng Chooi on 11 October 2000. Before the High Court judge, as said above, the application was dismissed with costs.

[3] Even though this appeal was a rehearing, we certainly were not unmindful of the reasons supplied by the learned High Court judge when dismissing the appeal. Indisputably the charge was an independent security document, and the rights of the appellant in the normal course of event would be protected, as contracted to by the parties hereto as provided for by the relevant agreement. If it were enforced it would merely be enforcing its statutory rights founded on that registered charge and would not face the hassle of having to sue for a debt. In the case of Kandiah Peter v. Public Bank Berhad [1993] 4 CLJ 332 the Supreme Court on p. 334 had held:

> He merely enforces his rights as a chargee by exercising his statutory remedy against the chargor in default. The chargee, therefore, does not sue for a debt. It is also clear that his claim for an order for sale is not based upon a covenant but under the registered charge. The order for sale when made under s. 256 of the Code is not a judgment or a decree. The court hearing the application for foreclosure does not make, and in any event ought not to make, any adjudication upon any substantive issues.

[4] In James Edward Buxton & Anor v. Supreme Finance (M) Berhad [1992] 4 CLJ 1945; [1992] 1 CLJ (Rep) 129 the Supreme Court had held:

A In all these cases, it was held that the interest of a registered charge is indefeasible by s. 340(1) of the Code unless it is made defeasible by s. 340(2). … The interest of a bona fide purchaser for value cannot prevail over that of a registered chargee.

B [5] By further analogy, in the case of Perwira Habib Bank Malaysia Berhad v. Viswanathan Ramakrishnan [1996] 2 CLJ 505, it was held at p. 506:

C [1] A decision on whether or not to allow the plaintiff's application for an order for sale could not be grounded on agency law alone, but on the broader investigation under s. 256(3) of the NLC. Agency law could not be applied directly to deny the plaintiff of his right which was contracted, under the statutory provisions of the NLC. The plaintiff, being a registered charge, acquired an indefeasible interest in the land under s. 340(1) of the NLC and could enforce the charge under s. 253(1) of the NLC (emphasis added).

[6] It was clear at the very outset that this was a case of a guarantor who had charged his property on behalf of a borrower, with the charge being a form of security for the balance of the E loan granted way back in 1995. To answer any query why we found that the charge was merely for additional security of the balance of the original loan, a need arises therefore to see the charge ie, LCC3, which is dated 20 April 1998 (RR 214). It reads:

F Kami, Eminent Avenue Sdn Bhd (351142-W), sebuah syarikat yang ditubuhkan di Malaysia di bawah Akta Syarikat 1965 dan mempunyai pejabat kami yang berdaftar di Level 12, Menara AA, 247, Jalan Tun Razak, 50400 Kuala Lumpur …

Bagi semua pendahuluan didalam ini atau yang kemudian daripada I ini dibuat kepada TOW KONG LIANG [No. K.P. 510513-07-5439(3781801)] atas permintaan kami …

[7] Apart from the above we refer also to the letter dated 27 February 1998 from the appellant to the borrower at p. 211 of the rekod rayuan which reads:

[8] Whichever way one looks at it, either the initial offer by the C appellant to the respondent or the charge, it was obvious that the charge was a consideration for the extension of the loan of 1995 to 48 months. It was additional security for the balance of the loan, which at that material time amounted to RM4,336,686.34. There was no indication at all that the charge was in respect of D any credit leasing or share financing transaction.

[9] The facts showed that it was not just a case of a person or entity lending money in a 'friendly' manner, but a contract subjected to the demanding provisions of the Moneylenders Act E 1951 (if not for the alleged statutory exemption). On that premise, if the appellant were not to comply with any of the provisions strictly, it would have acted in a manner contrary to a written law, and would tantamount to a cause to the contrary. Such non-compliance, if it did occur, would be ample reason to dismiss the F foreclosure proceedings.

[10] In the case of Low Lee Lian v. Ban Hin Lee Bank Bhd [1997] 2 CLJ 36 the Court of Appeal had occasion to enunciate, and enumerate that a chargor may show cause to the contrary under s. 256(3) of the National Land Code by demonstrating: G

i. that the charge is defeasible upon one or more of the grounds specified under sub-ss. (2) and (4)(b) of the said 256;

ii. that the charge has failed to meet the conditions precedent for H the making of an application for an order of sale, such as failure to make a demand or service of a notice in Form 16D, or that the notice demands sums not lawfully due from the charge; and

I iii. that its grant would be contrary to some rule of law or equity.

[11] The above case had adverted to the case of Murugappa Chettiar v. Letchumanan Chettiar [1939] MLJ 296 before enunciating the third consideration, whereat in the latter case the court had remarked:

> 'a chargor may 'shew cause' either in law or equity against an application for an order for sale, and that the Court should refuse to make an order in every case where it would be unjust to do so. By 'unjust' I mean contrary to those rules of the common law and equity … (emphasis added).

[12] Even though there was no mistaking that the appellant had not complied strictly with the Moneylenders Act 1951, the appellant had justified that non-compliance on the premise of an alleged exemption given by the Government earlier. If the evidence were to show that the appellant was a recognized moneylender that was lawfully exempted by the Ministry for that relevant period, then its shortcomings could be salvaged, but only for that particular period (Kok Swee Chin v. General Factoring & Credit Sdn Bhd [2004] 6 CLJ 101). Admittedly the success of the appellant's case depended solely on this argument. That being so it became encumbent upon us to scrutinize this argument thoroughly, and some of the questions we posed were as follows:

i. was there an exemption at all granted by the relevant Ministry at the time when the borrower had defaulted on the loan;

ii. where was the proof of that exemption;

iii. was it gazette; and

iv. if no proof of the exemption was forthcoming what then was the effect on the foreclosure proceeding?

[13] To have a better understanding of the problems before us it is quite necessary to regurgitate some of the salient facts:

i. Date of loan agreement … 27 February 1995;

ii. Charge executed on … 20 April 1998;

iii. Demand letter to borrower … 18 June 1998 and 1 July 1998;

iv. Demand letter to respondent … 4 February 1999;

v. Appellant issued Form 16 D notice … 12 June 2000;

A vi. Application for foreclosure filed on ... 4 October 2000;

vii. Exemption period … from 29 August 1997 until 28 August 2000;

B viii. Supposed extention … until 28 August 2001.

[14] Perusing the above skeletal facts, it was obvious that both the charge and the default in payment committed by the borrower, occurred smack in the middle of the alleged exemption period. Due to the timing and the significance of that exemption C order the court's first poser to the appellant was to request for proof of it. In response, the appellant had referred to a letter dated 4 July 2000 which reads:

[15] In brief, the above letter was a letter from the Ministry of Housing and Local Government informing the appellant that the Ministry had agreed to exempt it pursuant to s. 2A(2) of the Moneylenders Act 1951, pertaining to credit leasing and share financing activities, for the period beginning from 29 August 2000 until 28 August 2001 subject to certain conditions. The Ministry also had agreed that it would take the necessary action to gazette the exemption as quickly as possible. The exemption could be withdrawn if the appellant did not comply with the conditions.

[16] We were not impressed with this letter as we wanted gazettes, which exempted the appellant for the period of 29 August 2000, until 28 August 2001 and not a letter that promised future actions. It must be understood that this was an exemption founded on a statute, and no other evidence could speak out louder than the relevant gazette. Its non-production was not a mere irregularity that could be overlooked and waived especially when it was challenged by the respondent (Chee Pok Choy & Ors v. Scotch Leasing Sdn Bhd (Penerima dan Pengurus yang dilantik) [2001] 3 AMR 2609). Without such proof we were unwilling to accept the submission that an exemption had been granted by the Ministry.

[17] The appellant did attempt to allude to s. 114 (e) of the Evidence Act in that a court may presume that judicial and official acts have been regularly performed. Gauging this presumption provision, it clearly speaks out of what has been performed rather than what shall be done before such presumption is triggered. The inference here that the Ministry had regularly performed its promise ie, of gazetting the exemption was rebuttable as there was not an iota of evidence that could establish that fact. In fact the reverse was more likely. How could the appellant deny that:

a) it was merely a letter to inform the respondent that the exemption application had been approved;

b) the approval was subject to conditions;

c) there was no evidence to establish that these conditions had been complied with;

d) admittedly there was a promise by the Ministry to gazette;

A e) a promise to perform cannot be equated with having performed as required by s. 114 (e) of the Evidence Act 1950; and

f) the exemption could be withdrawn if the appellant did not
B comply with the conditions.

[18] Founded on the above reasons we were therefore naturally quite dissatisfied with the mere assertion by the appellant of the gazette's existence. Further there was no evidence to establish
C compliance of all the conditions. Additional to that even if the exemption had been gazetted, we were not satisfied that the exemption covered the purpose of the impugned charge. Evidentially it was obvious that the charge was not connected to any credit leasing and share financing activities but as additional D security for a previous loan (LCC3 and the letter of 27 February 1998 at RR 211). Most adverse to the appellant is the fact that the exemption was not retrospective but current and prospective.

[19] As regards the exemption of PU (B) 489, which were also not exhibited, and only the letter to go by as regards the contents
E of the gazette, the same argument applied likewise with equal force for the period from 29 August 1997 to 28 September 2000. We were satisfied that even if there was a valid exemption order for that three year period, of which was disputed vehemently by the respondent, it did not cover the transaction in this appeal.

F

[20] With these findings, the back of the appellant's argument had been broken. It was now shorn off of any protection, and left standing as a mere moneylender, subject to the full force of the provisions of the Moneylenders Act 1951. We were in total G agreement with the appeal judge's factual finding that:

i. the appellant had not given a copy of the note or memorandum of the moneylender's contract to the borrower, hence contravening s. 16 of the Act;

H ii. the appellant had imposed compound interest in the agreement contrary to s. 17 of the Act;

iii. no accounts were tendered in court by the appellant when commencing this action thus contravening s. 21 of the Act;

I

iv. the appellant had imposed an interest at the rate of 16% contrary to s. 22 of the Act; and

v. by imposing costs, charges and other expenses the appellant had contravened s. 23 of the Act.

[21] There is no shortage of authority, both English and local, that states that the provisions of the Moneylenders Act 1951 must be strictly complied with, the detraction of which will not get the sympathy of any court (Kartar Singh v. Mahinder Singh [1959] 25 MLJ 248; Subchent Kaur v. Chai Sau Kian [1958] 24 MLJ 32; Teja Singh v. Rattan Singh [1961] 27 MLJ 39; Arjan Singh Son of Inder Singh v. Hashim Angullia & Ors [1941] 10 MLJ (SSR) 55). Founded on those findings of facts, that the appellant had not sufficiently established that it was an exempted entity at the relevant time, coupled with the obvious evidence that it had breached a large number of provisions in the Moneylenders Act 1951, we were satisfied that 'cause to the contrary' had been established within the meaning of s. 256(3) of the National Land Code 1965. We thus unanimously had no reservation in dismissing this appeal with costs. We thereupon ordered that the order of the High Court be reaffirmed and the deposit of the appellant be paid to the respondent to account of its taxed costs.
